Indian Ink "à la Pagode" available in bottles, is deep black and indelible. Of exceptional density and light stability, it is used by drawing artists and painters world wide.

Sennelier inks, which are likened to Indian inks, are available in a selection of high quality colours. Extremely rich, these inks are manufactured with shellac gum giving (to each shade) unique brilliance, brightness and vibration under light. They can be applied with a brush or ink pen and give a satin to brilliant film depending on thickness. They dry rapidly and display a high degree of water resistance, without being indelible. These inks are highly sought after for calligraphy, quill drawings, washes, for textile creations and materials research. They can be protected with a pencil fixative in order to increase their light stability.
